

Mr. Steven D. Stehr, Director of the School of Politics, Philosophy & Public Affairs at Washington State University.

Dr. Steven D. Stehr holds academic degrees from the University of Nebraska (B.S. in Economics; M.A. in Political Science) and the University of California, Berkeley (Ph.D. in Political Science). His primary teaching and research interests are in the areas of public policy and public administration with a particular focus on the political dynamics associated with natural and human-caused disasters. Dr. Stehr's research has been supported by the National Science Foundation, the National Research Council, National Academy of Science, the Century Foundation, and the Natural Hazards Center at the University of Colorado, Boulder. His work has appeared in Public Administration Review, Urban Affairs Review, Natural Hazards Review, Review of Public Personnel Administration and the International Journal of Mass Emergencies and Disasters, among other scholarly outlets.