

Karsten Friis, Head of the Security and Defence Research Group, Norwegian Institute of International Affairs (NUPI)

Mr. Karsten Friis holds degrees from the University of Oslo and London School of Economics. Friis has previously worked for the OSCE in the Kosovo, Montenegro and Serbia, and for the Norwegian Armed Forces. His main area of expertise is security and defense policies, international military operations, civilian-military relations, cyber security, as well as the Western Balkans. His latest publications include: NATO and Collective Defence in the 21st Century: An Assessment of the Warsaw Summit (editor) Routledge 2017; and Conflict in Cyber Space: Theoretical, strategic and legal perspectives (co-editor), Routledge 2016.