

Mrs. Kristie L. OXFORD

Scientist at Pacific Northwest National Laboratory – PNNL

USA

Mrs. Kristie L. Oxford is a scientist in the Earth and Biological Sciences Directorate at the Pacific Northwest National Laboratory (PNNL) since 2015. Apart from that, since 2008 she is also an Intelligence officer within the United States Air Force Reserve.

She holds a Certificate of Biotechnology from Solano Community College, USA (1999), and a Bachelor of Science in Zoology, with a minor in military studies from North Carolina State University (1996). Since 2012 Mrs. Oxford has a PhD in Microbiology from the University of California, USA. Her academic work also includes various peer-reviewed publications.

Mrs. Oxford has also previously served as an active duty officer (1996-2000) and an intelligence officer (2000-2008) within the United States Air Force Reserve.