

James Gow is Professor of International Peace and Security and Co-Director of the War Crimes Research Group at King's College London. He is a non-resident scholar with the Liechtenstein Institute, Princeton University and previously lectured in European Studies at Hatfield Polytechnic (now the University of Hertfordshire).

He has served as an expert adviser and an expert witness for the Office of the Prosecutor at the UN International Criminal Tribunal for the former Yugoslavia, where he was the first ever witness at an international criminal tribunal, and as an Expert Adviser to the UK Secretary of State for Defence.

Gow has held visiting positions at the University of Sheffield, the Woodrow Wilson International Center for Scholars in Washington, Columbia University, and Princeton University. His numerous publications include Triumph of the Lack of Will: International Diplomacy and the Yugoslav War, The Serbian Project, Slovenia and the Slovenes, War and War Crimes, Prosecuting War Crimes: Lessons and Legacies of the International Criminal Tribunal for the former Yugoslavia and Security, Democracy and War Crimes, The Art of Creating Power: Freedman on Strategy, War, Law and Technology, Impact in International Affairs, and Reconciliation After War: Historical Perspectives on Transitional Justice.

In 2013, Gow won a Leverhulme Trust Major Research Fellowship and since 2016 has been engaged on a series of major collaborative projects, funded by the Arts and Humanities Research Council and the British Academy on 'Art and Reconciliation' focused on the Western Balkans, with Prof. Rachel Kerr and colleagues at the University of the Arts and the London School of Economics, and partners in Bosnia and Hercegovina. Gow was awarded the Fellowship of King's College London in 2019.