

Adrian Duță – Senior Advisor, Defence & Security

Adrian Duță joined KPMG Romania in 2024 as a Senior Advisor for Defence & Security within the Deal Advisory team. A retired general with over 35 years of distinguished service in the defense sector, he previously served as Vice President of the Euro-Atlantic Resilience Centre.

His career includes senior leadership roles within the Ministry of National Defence and the Ministry of Foreign Affairs, where he developed extensive expertise in intelligence, surveillance, capability development, and strategic management.

His contributions to European security are further reflected in his role as a guest lecturer at the Carol I National Defence University and other prestigious academic institutions. He works closely with entrepreneurs, defense industry associations, and leaders from both the public and private sectors to support the transformation, scaling, and modernization of their organizations.

A strong advocate for innovation and agility, Adrian frequently collaborates with startups, helping them scale their solutions and build effective partnerships with large corporations, creating value for all stakeholders involved. With extensive experience in Defence & Security solutions for medium and large international companies, he is recognized for his ability to identify strategic opportunities, simplify complexity, and guide clients toward clear, actionable decisions.

Clients value his European perspective, in-depth understanding of national and international security frameworks, and familiarity with the European Union regulatory environment.
