Adrian Florea is a seasoned executive with nearly 30 years of experience in leadership and management roles across multinational corporations, publicly listed companies as well as private and family-owned businesses. His industry expertise spans construction, energy, telecommunications, IT, and aviation, with strong capabilities in corporate governance, general management, digital transformation, and business development. He has over a decade of experience serving on more than 15 Boards of Directors across the private sector, state-owned enterprises, and non-governmental organizations. His roles have included executive member, independent non-executive director (INED), and Chairman, contributing to both newly established and long-standing boards. Adrian holds a bachelor's degree in aerospace engineering from the Politehnica University of Bucharest, a postgraduate degree in Business Management from the Bucharest Academy of Economic Studies, an Executive MBA from Kennesaw State University (Georgia, USA), and a Master of Arts in Board Practice and Directorship from Henley Business School, University of Reading.