

Sascha Fahrbach is a lecturer at Kozminski University, specialising in communication and cybersecurity. He is an international media expert, and moderator who has presented and hosted across various countries and international organizations, with experience covering global affairs, technology, and business. He has worked in the cybersecurity sector for over eight years, particularly in the privileged access management space, and brings more than 12 years of experience in new media, communications, and strategic engagement. Having lived in seven countries, including the US, Germany, and Brazil, he has helped clients across multiple industries navigate media, strategic communication, and digital risk in an increasingly complex information environment.